HAWAIIAN DEMOCRATS LOOK ON AT REPUBLICAN SCRAP AT COLISEUM

Sidelights on Big Politics Given in Letter from M. C. Pacheco

By M. C. PACHECO.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 22, 1912.—This has been an exciting day. It has been excitement, rush, alarm, pandemonium and pleasure. Mr. Effinger and myself arrived in Chicago at 9:15 this morning, after a tiresome journey across six States via the Southern Pacific. Mr. Waller went straight on from Omaha, Neb., to Baltimore, while Mr. Effinger and myself decided to have a look at the G. O. P. circus, in session since the 18th inst. And Mr. Effinger and myself are now congratulating ourselves that we came on to Chicago, for we have had the experience of our lives here. The first thing we did upon our arrival was to get into a taxicab and make a bee-line for a good hotel. We went to the Hotel La Salle, and were very agreeably surprised when we learned that Governor Frear and the rest of the Republican bunch had rooms on the same floor—the tenth—with us.

We were literally and figuratively members of the "great unwashed," for we had on us three days and nights' accumulation of alkali, dust and soot of the States of California, Nevada, Wyoming, Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois. Excitement Starts.

The day's excitement started as soon as we had washed up a bit. We heard a band down in the street, and looking down from the dizzy height of the tenth story we saw the insurgent California delegation parading on its way to the Coliseum, which is fourteen blocks away from the La Salle. The Johnson-Henry bunch have a band of their own, and every man jack of them wears a beaver hat and a frock coat. They cut quite an impressive figure, believe me.

We left our cards for the Hawaiian Republican contingent and started down to the lobby, where I separated from Effinger, who went to see some business friends.

Spot Local People.

Looking around among the many people in the lobby, I saw John Wise and Albert Horner sitting "side by side" and looking rather gloomy. Judge Hartwell was sitting alone a little distance away. After exchanging alohas with the kama'aina, we engaged in a general political discussion of Mr. Taft's chances for the nomination and reelection, and both Mr. Horner and Mr. Wise were of the opinion that Taft has no earthly show at the polls in November. Wise expressed disgust at the way the national committee and the committee on credentials had robbed Roosevelt of the contested delegates. These expressions of Taft's political weakness and strong-arm methods coincided exactly with the expressions I heard all the way from California to Chicago.

All the way East we met people who were willing to talk on the political situation, and they either said that if nominated Taft did not have the ghost of a chance, or that they would vote for either one or the other. Americans, both Republicans and Democrats, feel that both Taft and Roosevelt have lowered the prestige and dignity of the nation by their mutual recriminations, vituperation and their appeals to the prejudice and violent emotions of the common rabble, instead of appealing to the judgment and intellect of the thinking classes. It is the misfortune of the Republican party to find its leadership in strong-arm methods, and this is where our real adventures for the day started. After the show trickery and knavery—a combination we started for the Wellington Hotel, that will be found very difficult to where Johnny Wilson is staying. On

How the big Chicago scrap looked to a Hawaiian Democrat is told interestingly by M. C. Pacheco of the Star-Bulletin mechanical department, who is a member of the Hawaiian delegation to the Bourbon conclave at Baltimore. Pacheco, in the following letter to the Star-Bulletin, gives many sidelights on Big Politics as he saw it in Chicago. He writes the members of the Hawaii delegation say Taft can not be elected.

assimilate in the coming election. The people are tired to death of boss rule on the one hand, and hesitate on the other to encourage the establishment of a Caesarism which would destroy the usefulness of the constitution and nullify the Declaration of Independence.

The Big Show.

Having secured a ticket to visit the Republican convention, through the courtesy of Mr. Horner, Mr. Effinger and myself started for the Coliseum early in the afternoon. I obtained admission without difficulty, and was in time to see Allen of Kansas address the convention. During the course of Mr. Allen's address there was some lively cheering from the delegates and the galleries, but Root would immediately pound upon his table with an enormous gavel for order. Once a delegate got obstreperous and Root ordered a cop to sit on him. Mr. Fairbanks was the next speaker, but he was received very coolly by the galleries. There was a ripple of laughter throughout the vast auditorium when some fellow shouted out to the Vice President something about buttermilk. An elderly gentleman a little ahead of me shouted "What's the matter with Taft?" but he was greeted with cries of "Cut it out!" There was absolutely no enthusiasm for Taft. Taft has been crushed by his own steam roller—he is dead, politically! The uninteresting proceedings soon got on my nerves, and I came out and gave my ticket to Effinger, who was outside on Sixteenth street watching a union demonstration of several thousand men. At one time I thought there would be a riot between the parading union men and the mounted police, but the cops soon quelled the incipient disturbance without bloodshed.

Going back to my room at the hotel I was visited by John Wise, young Achi and Johnny Wilson, who is here buying machinery for his Hecla belt-road contract. John Wise, Charles A. Rice and "Doc" Monsarrat leave for home tonight.

After supper Effinger and myself went to the Studbaker Theater to see Elsie James in "The Slim Princess," and this is where our real adventures for the day started. After the show trickery and knavery—a combination we started for the Wellington Hotel, that will be found very difficult to where Johnny Wilson is staying. On the way Effinger missed his pocketbook and immediately got excited. And he had good reason for getting alarmed, for the pocketbook held about eighty dollars in currency. After satisfying himself that the pocketbook was gone, we decided to go back to the theater to see if it had dropped out of his pocket during the time we sat there. When we got to the theater it was already darkened, but upon appealing to someone in the office, the lights were turned on and we went up to the balcony to search for Effinger's wealth, and, miracle of miracles, the pocketbook was lying very snugly under the seat. With effusive thanks to the obliging attendants who had shown us the way, we went out on Michigan avenue to shout our joy. But, lo! what's this big mob lining the beautiful boulevard? They are waiting for Teddy. The insurgents are holding a rump convention in Orchestra Hall and Teddy the demagogue is expected at any minute.

Here Comes Teddy.

In a few minutes cheering was heard up the avenue, and it swept towards us with the coming of an automobile in which Tumbo the Lion Slayer stood up and very graciously waved his gray felt hat at the multitude. About 12 o'clock Teddy the Fearless and his friends came out and there was an explosion in front of Teddy. I thought that someone had shot the hero of San Juan, but it was only a reporter taking a flashlight picture of Teddy and those surrounding him and guarding him jealously. The immense crowd rushed towards the automobile with Roosevelt's party and vociferated for a speech. Roosevelt stood up in the machine and, waving his cowboy hat, commanded silence. While the restless crowd quieted down Roosevelt's lips twitched convulsively, exposing his famous teeth. He then addressed the multitude, commencing with these words: "Friends and fellow citizens, I thank you for the reception you have accorded me." He then went on to speak briefly of the principles he stands for and made mention of the "taunted trickery" used by the Taft faction, concluding with these words: "We are in this fight to fight it to a finish."

In the crowd outside Orchestra Hall I met Jack Atkinson and V. E. St. Osorio of Hilo. KAHUNANUI.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

Don't Poison Baby.

Forty years ago almost every mother thought her child must have paregoric or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and a few drops too many will produce the sleep from which there is no waking. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody, without labeling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrup," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. Castoria does not contain narcotics.

The signature of Dr. J. C. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria. Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"I have frequently prescribed Castoria for common ailments of children with good results." W. A. CRANDALL, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.

"As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine and, aside from my own family experience, I have, in my years of practice, found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home." Wm. J. McCHANE, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what stuff is put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use in proper cases. I judge it to be a very useful, as well as harmless family medicine." N. B. BAZAN, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

SAYS FEW KNOW NATIONAL HYMN

Has Noted Much Stumbling in Singing of Star-Spangled Banner

BOSTON Mass., June 15.—Practical patriotism, as shown by actually learning the national hymn, "The Star-Spangled Banner," has been advocated in no uncertain terms by Miss Katherine K. Davis, of the sophomore class at Wellesley.

Miss Davis, whose home is in St. Joseph, Mo., has been so much impressed by the need of greater familiarity with the national hymn that she has written about it in the college paper.

She admits, however, that "The Star-Spangled Banner" is difficult of memorization. To a Boston Post reporter she said:

"Only about one person in five hundred really knows the 'Star-Spangled Banner.'"

"Here at Wellesley College when we sang this national hymn in chapel on Washington's Birthday, it was discouraging to notice the way the girls stumbled over the words."

"In one way folk cannot be blamed for not memorizing 'The Star-Spangled Banner.' The music is so difficult that the words slip from one's mind. In the first place, I think 'America' should be recognized as the national hymn, for both music and words are more easily memorized. In the second place, 'The Star-Spangled Banner' is not found in the hymn book, and I am sure if I wanted to get a copy of the song, I would have a very hard time finding one."

"People of other countries are well trained in their national hymns. For instance, English people are very demonstrative when their national hymn, 'God Save the King,' is being sung. In France and Italy the spirit is the same, and even the most ignorant are able to sing the national hymns. Americans should be as familiar with their own patriotic music."

"School children should be obliged to learn the full significance of the hymn."

"It is discouraging to note in how few homes are pictures of George Washington and Martha Washington. Few homes seem to have a flag. Way this is so I do not know, except, perhaps, that patriotism is not in vogue."

"Just what I can do to help cause general interest in the singing of the 'Star-Spangled Banner' I do not know, for college girls are only a small proportion of the number who are unfamiliar with it."

"As much as I reverence the flag, I doubt if I sang that song in chapel without making mistakes. The reason I did so was because I have not been where the song has been sung. That is one of the great difficulties; it is not sung often enough. Bands do not play it, as frequently as they should. The singer is rare who has it in her repertoire. This lack of popularity is due, I think, to the fact that it has not a catchy air."

"Perhaps teachers might play an active part in awakening the interest of the children. About the only way one can bring it to the attention of older persons is by publishing it more often in pamphlets or in hymn books."

The sixty remaining indictments against Abe Ruef, convicted political leader of San Francisco, were ordered dismissed.
